PROLEMURIS

Digger than monkey, more vicious than a monkey and better than a monkey. The yellow striped, blue prolemuris is in danger of going extinct. Its food source (egg sea ticks) are going scarce day by day. They are extremely dangerous ~~now~~ when hungry considering their sharp teeth made to rip through flesh.

Sneak attack

NT

All of the three species of Prolemurids call the waters of the Awawally reef home. Some prefer the deep depths of the divided forest, and some the Haldajish Mountains. Most of them live in tree-top houses which is an ideal habitat for them. The shady cover of the towering flora ~~conceals~~ conceals them from the dreaded ~~near~~ wolf's snubbling on range young Prolemurises, below. Over the years, the Prolemurids species only come together for two things, mating and building adult courses to help them practice running away from un-wanted ~~dangerous~~ dangerous creatures on Pandora.

Habitat

The Prolemurids have a particularly striking appearance. From ~~long legs~~ <sup>long legs</sup> to fantastic fingers, they actually have quite alot in common with flying squirrels and a chimpanzee. Its most distinctive feature has to be its webbed wings. They make it super easy to glide away from any predator standing in its path. At night, you may see neon blue and yellow bodies winging through the air. If it is a blue, then you're as fast as you can. It would be a blue ~~because~~ <sup>because</sup> they are going at light speed because a viper wolf is trying to have dinner.

Appearance

Diet

Prolemurids's main food source is the reef. It hunts the wrap-like fish by hiding out on the floor and waiting for the tick to pass by. Prolemurids ~~are~~ have light speed reflexes so when you being up the waters of the Awawally bay, always be one on the look for bioluminescent eyes, glowing in the waters. A way of killing land mammals is like no other. They climb up into a high tree and vomit stomach acid anything that comes walking into their territory.

The prolemurids currently holds the record for the "most dangerous animal in Pandora" due to the stomach acid it vomits up when threatened. They are extremely solitary animals and only come together for two things, to mate every six months, and to build build ~~secret~~ <sup>secret</sup> courses. If you threaten them, you will never see the light of day again. The acid that they produce is ten times more corrosive than ~~any~~ <sup>any</sup> the strongest acid on earth.
