"Where's the stupid pack of sugar, I thought the wolf. Wait I know where I can find some sugar - at my neighbour!" In an instant he grabbed an empty pot and stampeded out. Taking his time he meandered it to the straw house: ^(*) The friendly faces of the plump pigs they would probably perchance to help a neighbour in need. He crept towards the door. He put his hand out on the door-handle. He looked round. He pushed the door. As if it were the lightest thing on earth, it fell down

(*) The friendly faces of the plump pigs popped into his mind. They would probably have a piggy perchance for helping a neighbour in need.
