

Recognition assembly – Years 4, 5 & 6
28th March 2025

The digestive System 19.3.2025

The digestion process starts when we eat food.

The tongue, teeth and saliva help to break down food in your mouth.

The ~~oesoph~~ oesophagus helps to transport food from the mouth to the stomach.

This is the <sup>Stomach</sup> Stomach. there is acid which helps to break down food.

The liver works with the stomach because it produces the stomach acid.

This is the stomach muscles. The stomach muscles help move the food from the stomach to the small intestine.

This is the ~~Small~~ Small <sup>Small</sup> Small intestine. The Small intestine is 20 feet long but is squashed all together.

This is the large intestine. It is used for removing waste from the body.

- Key Words
- Small intestine
- Large intestine
- Oesophagus
- Stomach
- Blood cells
- Liver
- Stomach acid

see key words

The Digestive System

19.3.25

The digestion process starts when we eat food. The tongue, teeth and saliva help to break down food in your mouth.

The oesophagus helps to transport food into your stomach.

This is the stomach. There is acid which helps to break down food.

The liver works with the stomach because it produces the stomach acids. It also produces bile.

The stomach muscles help push the food into the small intestine.

The small intestine helps the nutrients in the food absorb into the blood.

This is the large intestine. It takes the waste and takes it out of the body.

Key Words
Small intestine
Large intestine
Oesophagus
Stomach
Blood cells
Liver
Stomach acid

Je vais à Paris!

 First I cycle to King Cross New Cross onto station.

 I catch the underground line to Canada Water the Jubilee line to London Bridge and the Northern line to King's Cross at Pancras.

 I take the Eurostar to Paris. It is a 38km journey. It takes 3 hours. I go across the English channel. (Paris is the capital city of France).

 Then I cycle to the house of apartment. I have done a house wrap so the hotel's don't need to use more energy. The house has solar panels. I remember to turn off all lights before I leave.

 I go on a boat tour along the River Seine to see all the monuments.

 I go to the shops to get stuff for dinner (bread sourced). I remind the shopkeepers and I remember to recycle all the wrappers when I get home.

 I go past the Notre-Dame and take a photo (or 5).

 I walk up the Eiffel tower and take photos on the lawn.

 I stop by a cafe where I get a croissant for lunch. I get a drink and reuse the tin and other things food I will eat.

 I go to the Louvre to see the art. It is the biggest museum in the world.

 Finally I cycle home again, after a quick visit to the Paris zoo.

 I prepare dinner and eat it with some friends.

 I pop out for an ice cream before bed.

 Finally I go to bed.

My Luggage:
water bottle, reusable
bag, clothes
toothbrush

Digestion exploration text

26/3/20

- digestive system -
- mouth -
- oesophagus -
- stomach -
- small intestine -
- large intestine -
- nutrients -
- saliva -
- enzymes -
- digestive acids -

The first stage of the digestive system is when your food is broken into smaller bits and soften by saliva in your mouth. After you swallow it, muscles push it down a long tube called the oesophagus down to your stomach. When it reaches your stomach, stomach acid and enzymes (digestive acids) and enzymes breaks your food in more pieces. This is more nutritious like vitamins, proteins, carbohydrates etc are released. Then, the small particles of food travel down to the small intestine where the most nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream. After this process your food will go into your large intestine and all of the waste is put into the toilet.

Year 6

“Want to catch something today at the lake?” asked James's dad driving with four fishing rods in the back seat.

“Yeah hopefully – the lake hasn't been giving good catches lately,” replied James. It was a beautiful day out; the birds were chirping, and the sun was shining. While his dad parked, James took the rods and looked for the boat.

James and his dad hadn't had some bonding time for a while, so James's dad took him fishing to finally have some time together.

“It's nice today, isn't it?” asked dad leaping into the boat.

“Yeah, I guess it is,” replied James as he cast his rod far away in the lake before he had even got in the boat. James was determined to catch something, but his dad also was, and about 5 minutes in, his dad caught something.

“I have one!” shouted dad as he started to reel the rod in. “Get the net!”

James went to get the net but noticed something move. It was dark green and sinister; it was just staring at him. Nevertheless, he thought that his mind was playing tricks on him.

“What was that?” James whispered to himself as he got the net. He ran to his dad who was waiting for him, but he saw something again on the corner of his eye. He couldn't make out what it was, though he was getting a bit unsettled.

“Dad, are you seeing things?” James questioned curiously. yet still uneasy however

“No... I haven't seen anything,” dad responded wondering why James asked that question “Why?”

“Want to catch something today at the lake?” asked James's dad driving with four fishing rods in the back seat.

“Yeah hopefully – the lake hasn't been giving good catches lately,” replied James. It was a beautiful day out; the birds were chirping, and the sun was shining. While his dad parked, James took the rods and looked for the boat.

James and his dad hadn't had some bonding time for a while, so James's dad took him fishing to finally have some time together.

“It's nice today, isn't it?” asked dad leaping into the boat.

“Yeah, I guess it is,” replied James as he cast his rod far away in the lake before he had even got in the boat. James was determined to catch something, but his dad also was, and about 5 minutes in, his dad caught something.

“I have one!” shouted dad as he started to reel the rod in. “Get the net!”

James went to get the net but noticed something move. It was dark green and sinister; it was just staring at him. Nevertheless, he thought that his mind was playing tricks on him.

“What was that?” James whispered to himself as he got the net. He ran to his dad who was waiting for him, but he saw something again on the corner of his eye. He couldn't make out what it was, though he was getting a bit unsettled

“Dad, are you seeing things?” James questioned curiously. yet still uneasy however

“No... I haven't seen anything” dad responded wondering why James asked that question “Why?”

“Nothing” sighed James he thinks he is going crazy now. James just tried to forget about what happened, he started to inspect the fish he found out it was a grey trout. Since he found out what fish it was, he went back to fishing.

“I have a fish on the hook!” shout James with joy as he reeled in the fish, he had finally caught a fish.

“I will get the net!” announced Dad as he ran to get the net' he got the net and ran back but the fish was already reeled in by James. It was a tiny bait fish.

“You won't need net for that” Dad chuckled as he put the net back.

“Ha very funny” James answered. Upset, he went to eat a sandwich from the cooler, as he went to grab a sandwich and a bottle of water. but he saw something, something big, something huge. It looked ancient and enchanted. James had his heart in his throat he couldn't move he wasn't frozen. He couldn't talk his mouth paused; his feet glued to the floor of the boat. He was shocked for his life. The beast was at least 10 meters tall.

“D-dad look” James said pointing to the beast that just summoned out of the water, towering over. “Yeah, James wh...” dad just froze his knees were knocking like crazy “Run!”. James sprinted over to

