Story sequencing

Long ago in a dark cave, there lived a deadly dragon. Where did it come from? What's its name? How old is it?

Does it have a family? Does it have any allies?" nobody knows.

The sky above the cave was gloomy and mysterious. Thick clouds slowly pass by creating a dark shadow over the mountain tops. All was quiet apart from the sound of the wind blowing and the dragon's heavy, smelly breath.

The dragon was as red as ~~scorching-hot~~ fire. His claws were sharp like the sharpest knife. He was ~~as~~ bigger than the biggest MONSTER IN THE WHOLE WIDE WORLD!

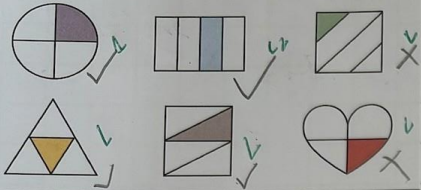

He could sweep away an army with a single gentle push of his mighty wing.

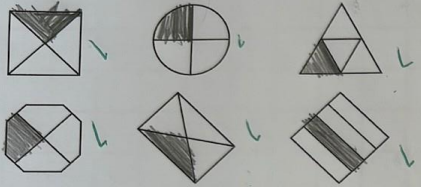

Suddenly the dragon seized the princess who was desperately running away. She was running as fast as she could but the dragon was faster. He seized her up and flew away.

When the brightness of the sunshine melted away, the faint, pale and ghostly fog crept in as quiet as a mouse. A weird soundtrack of wailing coliced through Erin's mind she felt like she was an ice cube. She wished, hoped and wished that soon she would find a cosy jumper. Erin walked towards the edge of the boat, gazing at the covered Black Rock. Now it looked like a ghost because it was covered in fog. Murky Murky fog. Murkier fog. The murkiest fog. Erin was usually very confident and the total opposite of scared. But this time Erin felt... empty and she had not ever had this feeling in her whole life, but... so terrified. Erin was missing mum. Erin missed home. Erin missed her friends. Erin missed everyone she knew. I am brave. I am brave. I am brave. She whispered to her self under her breath. "I wish I stayed at home. I should have listened to mum. That was naughty!" Erin cried, but those sounds turned to silence which broke into a cry.

Erin lived near a big fishing town and longed to go out to sea on a boat with her mum. Everyone told her it was too dangerous because of the legend of Black Rock. One day, she sneaked onto the boat without her mum noticing and it set off with her on board.

As before the sun ~~set~~ left, the fog fell, and it started to get cold and wet. ~~At~~ ~~11~~ ~~T~~ ~~he~~ ~~little~~ ~~girl~~ ~~wished~~ she brought a jumper or coat with her. She ~~said~~ it started to rain so she covered her head with her hands. The fog became ~~thicker~~ ~~thick~~ ~~it~~ became <sup>so thick</sup> that she ~~is~~ ~~really~~ ~~became~~ couldn't see ~~that~~ ~~much~~. It became ~~thicker~~ that the more she travelled, the ~~more~~ ~~more~~ ~~thicker~~ ~~it~~ ~~was~~ the thickest <sup>she had ever seen!</sup> She couldn't ~~se~~ ever see the mountains that should've been right next to her. The fog worsened until she ~~tho~~ ~~wa~~ thought that she was blind - she couldn't ever see see her hand of the boat! ~~was~~ ~~was~~ She blind or was it fog? wind brushed past her. She just stood, wanting to dream about the ~~hill~~ mountains.
